But today's bachelor is a more refined breed. Gone are the days of sitting in a dimly lit corner room while a bored woman grinds on your lap, now, when you go to a bachelor party, you're just as likely to sit and enjoy a fine wine and an expensive shampoo and/or beard oil. If you're looking to throw an unforgettable bachelor party for you and your best bros before committing to that one special person (or if you've been tasked to plan a bachelor party for your best buddy), stay away from Las Vegas and Atlantic City and plan something special instead. Here are just a few ideas. Advertisement - Continue Reading Below 1 Take a cross-country road trip. The United States is lined with some truly epic stretches of highway. Tap into your great American novelist and hit the road with nothing but a solid playlist, a few friends, and no agenda. Route 66 continues to be one of the most quintessentially American highways and has withstood the test of time. (Yes, you can still get your kicks on it, or so we hear.) Pass through the cornfields of Illinois all the way to Los Angeles, hitting the Ozarks, St. Louis, and the Grand Canyon along the way.For dramatic coastal views, hiking, camping, Redwoods, and several craft breweries along the way, the Pacific Coast Highway is another fan favorite. Starting at Olympic National Park in Washington, the windy, sun-drenched corridor crosses through the Oregon coastline, San Francisco, and Big Sur before ending at San Diego. The one thing you'll need for the ultimate road trip experience? A camper van, which will help you save money on lodging. Cruise America is a one-stop shop for all USA road trip RV and camper van rentals.Rent here 2 Head to an unconventional bachelor party destination. In the past, most bachelor parties would've headed to a city like Amsterdam or Bangkok for some seedy fun. But the new breed of man is all about soaking up the culture, along with excellent eye candy. Consider a destination bachelor party to a place like Mexico City, which might not have the beaches or all-inclusive resorts of, say, Cancun, but is packed with fantastic restaurants, history, bars, and nightlife. Book a stay at Condesa df, one of the trendiest hotels in the area, followed by a night sucking down oysters at La Docena Oyster Bar & Grill and dancing the night away at the speakeasy Poe, which has a hell of a cocktail list. Book here 3 Partake in some carnivore carnage. What could be more manly than grilling in the great outdoors? Add a few of your best mates and a case of craft beer, and you have an enviable bachelor getaway. Take a three-day barbecue course at the five-star Broadmoor resort in Colorado Springs, led by Steven Raichlen of PlanetBarbecue. The syllabus covers all things grill-related, from Argentinian steaks to Thai street snacks to Korean bbq. It's not cheap (the package costs $2400 per person, which includes breakfast, lunch, and accommodations), but if you're a meat lover, it's an unforgettable experience. Book here 4 Brew your own beer. Brewery tours are a good idea in theory, but you can take it to the next level by brewing your OWN beer. The Flying Barrel in Frederick, Md. is one of many breweries across the country that offer beginners' brew-your-own-beer classes. The initial class takes about two to three hours, and a second session for bottling happens a few weeks later, so be sure to pick a brewery closet to home. Another alternative is to buy your own home-brew kit for the guys to do together, like this Brew Demon Craft Beer Kit ($75). It's a gift that keeps on giving.Buy it here 5 Take an old-school fishing trip. Fishing is yet another manly, bearded, flannel-y activity that is great for a chill bachelor party. Head to The Ranch at Rock Creek in Montana, where you can catch, clean, and cook your bounty. Spend the afternoon stalking the bevy of trout that swim through the Sapphire Mountain streams.Book here 6 Chase some thrills. For the man who's always searching for that next shot of adrenaline, take the guys on a day trip or weekend getaway for some heart-pumping outdoor thrills. Skydiving is the ultimate activity that ends up on bachelor party lists. The U.S. has 300 drop zones, but Hawaii is a fan favorite (try Skydive Hawaii for an epic aerial experience). But if airborne isn't your thing, you can unleash your inner Jacques Costeau underwater with shark cage diving. Try Snappa Charters in Naragansett, Rhode Island ($270 per person for scuba divers). Some might call you crazy for going face-to-face with a blue shark — but that's kind of the point, isn't it?Book here This content is created and maintained by a third party, and imported onto this page to help users provide their email addresses. Majestic Singer: Rap Related Articles The bachelor party is the ultimate celebration of the groom and his nearest and dearest. Whether you're meeting in person or planning a virtual gathering, the mission should always be having a grand old time. Read on for our list of 22 fun-filled bachelor party ideas for the groom's biggest party before the big day. 01 of 22 Render the groom speechless by having Chuck Norris, Bret Hitman Hart, The Hoff, or any of his favorite celebrities make a special guest appearance. Via Cameo, you can get personalized video greetings straight from the stars. Be sure to book the cameo up to five days in advance and play the video during your soirée. 02 of 22 Bachelor party planning should center around what the groom likes. Select a theme according to what he rants and raves about—whether that's a film, artist, era, trend, or place. 03 of 22 According to Audrey Formisano, a Tequila Sommelier at Marriott Puerto Vallarta (one of the world's only resorts with a proprietary brand of tequila), "When you're trying out a new tequila, you need to experience the color, the smell, and really taste the different flavors; all of your senses come together to savor it." She adds that once you learn the art of sipping tequila like the locals do and pair it with food, people tend to see things differently. "The floral, herbal, smoky flavors begin to pop." Organize a tasting class from Hungry or Cozymeal, which has pop culture-inspired classes led by renowned culinary professionals so you can recreate dishes from movies and TV shows like The Mandalorian, The Office, or Crazy Rich Asians. For all the wine lovers, The Supper Share is a concierge service that connects people with sommeliers, chefs, and bartenders for their virtual happy hours. It was founded in March 2020 to help food and beverage professionals find new opportunities to share their expertise and talent. The sommelier runs the show on Zoom and will guide you through wine tasting sets that you order before your event. 13 of 22 Take yourself to Mexico with a zarandeado experience which is "a 500-year-old method for grilling fish over hot coals in a wood-fired oven". According to Monica Gonzalez, the Director of Sales and Marketing at Conrad Punta de Mita, you can recreate their hotel's sea-to-table, sand-in-your-toes beach barbecue in your backyard or on a beach near your home. "All you need is fresh fish marinated in a blend of tomato, guajillo chiles and exotic spices, a charcoal grill, great company, and a bucket of ice-cold beers—Mexican, of course." 14 of 22 Make like "Free Solo" and take your best buds climbing. If you don't live close to actual rocks, move things indoors. Climbing is rising in popularity and will even debut at the upcoming Tokyo Olympics. Data from the non-profit Outdoor Foundation found that about 5 million Americans now participate in sport climbing. 15 of 22 Raise the roof with a spirited trip around town. The party bus is a bachelor party staple and lets you couple sightseeing with drinking and dancing, and it's the ultimate "transportainment." 16 of 22 The groom's days of "playing the field" are over, so kick off the celebration with an at-home field day. Think homemade obstacle courses, an egg toss or spoon race, dizzy bat, toilet paper dodge ball, or a sock slide challenge. Want to take it up a notch? Task everyone with creating the best field day outfit and treat the winner to a special prize. Be warned that this may spark a sense of nostalgia and remind you just how much you've grown up. 17 of 22 Take to the great outdoors or someone's backyard to become one with nature. Bring sleeping gear, food supplies, and your crew. 18 of 22 Take your bachelor party off-road and drink in scenic views by renting out ATVs. Whether you call it four wheeling, ATV riding, or quad biking, sign up for a day out with the wind in your hair and your team by your side. 19 of 22 Everybody wants their 15 minutes of fame, right? Grant their wishes with a talent show where each attendant showcases their smoothest skills all in the name of entertainment. 20 of 22 Have all party guests play a game created in the groom's honor with bespoke inside jokes and memories. If you'd rather not do the legwork of devising the game from scratch, have a company like The Bundle Game do it for you. To increase the stakes, prepare snazzy prizes for the winners. 21 of 22 Bachelor parties don't have to be synonymous with debauchery and mayhem. You'll certainly deserve all those drinks and savory treats, however, after completing a race together. Pick a time for everyone to start, take selfies along the way and check in within a group chat when you finish. 22 of 22 Karaoke, anyone? Nothing bonds friends more than belting out hits together with reckless abandon. A social singing app like Smule will help get the party started virtually if you can't meet in person. You can also use Watch2gether to stream videos at the same playback rate to ensure no one trails two verses behind. Leave your inhibitions at the door and break out the Queen, Rolling Stones, and Thin Lizzy. The boys are back in town. FAQ Who plans the bachelor party? Traditionally, the bachelor party is planned by the best man or collectively by the groomsmen. Some grooms choose to plan, or at least take part in the planning, of their own bachelor party. Who pays for the bachelor party? Each attendee typically pays their own way, though some may choose to cover a portion of the groom's expenses in celebration. Occasionally, the groom's parents will make a contribution toward the total cost or a particular activity. When should you have a bachelor party? The best time to host a bachelor party is one to three months before the wedding, though anytime leading up to the big day is acceptable. Historically, the bachelor bash took place the night before the wedding but it's since fallen out of popularity since no one wants to be hungover at their own wedding.
